AN ACT to validate the Sittings and Proceedings of the Supreme Court lately held at Gisborne, and also to validate the Sittings and Proceedings of the District Court lately held at Gisborne aforesaid. Title.
[6th July, 1883.]

WHEREAS a sitting of the Supreme Court for the trial of civil and criminal issues was lawfully appointed to be held at the courthouse at Gisborne, on Monday, the eighteenth day of June, one thousand eight hundred and eighty-three: And whereas the Chief Justice, being the Judge of the said Court before whom such sitting was intended to be held, being unable to reach Gisborne at the appointed date, the Registrar of the Court there adjourned such sitting, in accordance with the power vested in him for that purpose by "The Supreme Court Act, 1882;" but, the courthouse being too small, the Registrar adjourned such sitting to be held at a place in Gisborne known as "McFarlane's Hall," where the Court was accordingly held: And whereas such adjournment was made erroneously, and ought to have been made to the courthouse aforesaid: And whereas civil and criminal issues have been tried at the sitting so held as aforesaid, and other proceedings have been taken thereat, and it is expedient the same should be validated as herein-after provided: And whereas sittings of the District Court were heretofore lawfully appointed to be held at the courthouse at Gisborne, but the sittings of the said Court have been held in McFarlane's Hall, and not at the said courthouse; and it is also expedient that such sittings, and the proceedings thereat and consequent thereon, should also be validated as aforesaid: Preamble.
